Apathy Wizards "Real Live Human Beings"

Bio: Apathy Wizards are a wandering gypsy folk punk four-piece from Murfreesboro, TN. They are a mobile hootenanny, a drunken sea chantey, and the tallest of tales.

The band combines an assemblage of bizarre acoustic instruments with all of the energy and panache of traveling medicine show. And the songs? They're infectiously catchy.

Employing a nomadic lifestyle and sound, the band has wandered far away from their beginnings in 2010. Starting as another electric band located in Muncie, IN, they now opt for performances without amplification, microphones, or even a stage.

Combine this style of performance with profound songwriting and an early punk rock ethos, and the four wizards create connection and catharsis through folk punk.

While their existence is transitory, their sound exists outside of time. Huge hooks, mega choruses, and driving rhythms all made with instruments that reached their heights of popularity in the 1920s.

About This Record:

Released in early 2016, this album was recorded live and directly to tape without any overdubs. Captured on a hot summer night in Muncie, IN, it features six epic tracks of catchy folk punk driven by a frantic mandolin and guitar, stomp/clap percussion, walking bass, auxiliary melodic madness, and a very rowdy audience. The result is a wild version of Man Man, Gogol Bordello, or Andrew Jackson Jihad, unplugged and uncensored.

Selected Press:

"Muncie, Ind., band whose sound blends European flavors with bluegrass and punk. Their gypsy rock attitude is apparent from the moment Thor Goodman sings, a voice that paints images of bar life and a footloose spirit. It's rollicking music, like an elegant but drunken sing-along good time through the forest. Imagine Jethro Tull making music with Johnny Thunders in Ireland."
